History of Arbor Day

Arbor Day is celebrated on April 30th. The first Arbor Day took place on April 10, 1872 in Nebraska. It was the brainchild of Julius Sterling Morton (1832-1902), a Nebraska journalist and politician originally from Michigan. Throughout his long and productive career, Morton worked to improve agricultural techniques in his adopted state and throughout the United States when he served as President Grover Cleveland's Secretary of Agriculture. But his most important legacy is Arbor Day. Morton felt that Nebraska's landscape and economy would benefit from the wide-scale planting of trees. He set an example himself planting orchards, shade trees and wind breaks on his own farm and he urged his neighbours to follow suit. Morton's real opportunity, though, arrived when he became a member of Nebraska's state board of agriculture. He proposed that a special day be set aside dedicated to tree planting and increasing awareness of the importance of trees. Nebraska's first Arbor Day was an amazing success. More than one million trees were planted. A second Arbor Day took place in 1884 and the young state made it an annual legal holiday in 1885, using April 22nd to coincide with Morton's birthday. In the years following that first Arbor Day, Morton's idea spread beyond Nebraska with Kansas, Tennessee, Minnesota and Ohio all proclaiming their own Arbor Days. Today all 50 states celebrate Arbor Day although the dates may vary in keeping with the local climate. At the federal level, in 1970, President Richard Nixon proclaimed the last Friday in April as National Arbor Day.

April Fools!

If you're feeling foolish this April Fool's Day, consider these not-so-smart predictions and proclamations from people who should have known better:

"I think there is a world market for about five computers."

Thomas Watson, founder of IBM, 1943

"The abdomen, the chest, and the brain will forever be shut from the intrusion of the wise and humane surgeon."

British surgeon Sir John Ericksen, surgeonextraordinary to Queen Victoria, 1873

"There is no likelihood man can ever tap the power of the atom."

Robert Millikan, Nobel Prize in physics 1923

"Louis Pasteur's theory of germs is ridiculous fiction."

Pierre Pachtet, professor of physiology, 1872

"Video won't be able to hold on to any market it captures after the first six months. People will soon get tired of staring at a plywood box every night."

Daryl Zanuck, 20th Century Fox executive 1946

"There is no reason anyone would want a computer in their home."

Ken Olson, president of Digital Equipment Corp., 1977

"Everything that can be invented has been invented."

Charles Duell, Director of the U.S. Patent Office, 1899

"Such startling announcements as these should be deprecated as being unworthy of science and mischievous to its true progress."

Sir William Siemens, electrical engineer, upon hearing about Thomas Edison's announcement of a successful light bulb, 1880

"Heavier than air flying machines are impossible."

Lord Kelvin, president of the Royal Society, 1895

"Rail travel at high speeds is not possible because passengers, unable to breathe, would die of asphyxia."

Dionysius Lardner, professor of natural philosophy and astronomy at University College in London, 1830

"This 'telephone' has too many shortcomings to be seriously considered as a means of communication. The device is inherently of no value to us."

Presidential Trivia

The first President to fly while in office was Franklin D. Roosevelt. In 1943, Roosevelt traveled on a Pan Am transoceanic Clipper from Miami to Casablanca for a meeting with Winston Churchill. This was the first time an American President had traveled on a plane while in office. Roosevelt was listed on the passenger manifest as Mr. Jones. In 1943, that transoceanic flight took 3 days.
